Awesome! 5 By Wow is amazeballs I absolutely LOVE this app! I'm so glad it came out for my laptop!Forms of Fertility Forms of Fertility Tiny Human Eggs Tiny Human Eggs Synthetic Oocytes Synthetic Oocytes Synthetic Human Ovaries The human ovary, seen here, is composed of a large number of germinal cells which produce the egg cells that will eventually develop into a mature egg, or oocyte. Oocytes are the smallest cells that have a nucleus and are capable of developing into a new person. Fertilization Fertilization Fertilization is when a sperm cell of an egg and a sperm cell of a sperm enter together and mix their DNA with the DNA from the egg cell. The egg cell is still alive, so after fertilization, it will still die if not fertilized or if fertilized by a defective sperm. The zygote is the fertilized cell. The zygote is the result of fertilization. During this process, the zygote's DNA is formed by combining the DNA of both the egg and the sperm cells. The zygote has the same DNA content as that of the original egg cell, but the cytoplasm, or the protein-rich fluid inside the cell, contains only the DNA from the egg cell. The zygote is still alive and needs to be
